Secrets Inside Families

This draft presents the assertions as claims attributed to named authors and books. It does not independently verify the allegations. Items marked “source needed” should be backed by a specific chapter, page number, interview, article, archival document, or other cite before publication. Working draft with improved references

Ed Donegan asserted this will never be admitted to in any remaining document and will be covered up by Abuse Of Power

❖ The Bush family.

- → Claims about the Bush family, Cold War networks, intelligence connections, Watergate, and Dealey Plaza should be attributed primarily to Russ Baker, Family of Secrets: The Bush Dynasty, America's Invisible Government, and the Hidden History of the Last Fifty Years (Bloomsbury Press, 2008; paperback ed. 2009). Use a page-specific citation for each separate factual claim. [Baker 2008/2009]

Gang Stalks create a basis for persecution while short-circuiting or conspiring against a right to a defense

Slander about a person including Slander resultant from Identity Theft can be used to justify any otherwise (and still) illegal actions if used as a basis for the illegal actions. My life is spent surrounded by Identity Theft and resultant harms to my property and person. It is more than reputation it is Abuse of Process in legal processes, fraud on the courts in adversarial systems for both detention and asset seizures from trusts. Mafia Konnection Ultra is a file on the archive in its original file name July2022LetterToTheGeneralPublic.html

It is my belief (from my life experience) that a key difference between persecution and prosecution is that in persecution the chance to vindicate oneself is not present thus unethical prosecutions may proceed without interrupton.

It sounds like you're articulating a normative distinction rather than a purely legal one. If your goal is to make the idea clearer or more rigorous, here are a few refined ways to express it, followed by a brief conceptual framing.

Polished restatement (close to your wording)

Based on my life experience, I believe a key difference between persecution and legitimate prosecution is that persecution denies the accused a genuine opportunity to vindicate themselves. As a result, unethical or bad-faith prosecutions can proceed without meaningful interruption or correction.

Slightly more formal / analytical version

A key distinction between persecution and legitimate prosecution lies in procedural fairness. In cases of persecution, the accused is effectively denied a real opportunity to defend or vindicate themselves, allowing unethical or politically motivated prosecutions to continue unchecked.

Conceptual clarification

Your insight aligns with a common ethical and legal principle:

- →

Prosecution (in its legitimate sense) presupposes

- →

due process

- →

impartial adjudication

- →

a meaningful right to defense

- →

the possibility of acquittal

- →

Persecution is characterized by

- →

predetermined guilt

- →

sham or inaccessible processes

- →

suppression of defense or evidence

outcomes that are effectively fixed in advance

In this framing, the absence of a genuine chance to vindicate oneself is not just a side effect of persecution—it is definitional. Once vindication is structurally impossible, the process ceases to be ethical prosecution and becomes persecution, even if it outwardly resembles legal procedure.

If you'd like, I can help you:

• →

sharpen this into a philosophical thesis,

• →

adapt it for a legal, political, or ethical essay,

or contrast it with formal legal definitions used in human rights law.

In about 2004 or so I recived this email from my father and I was afraid the police violence would spread to anyone I knew at all

From : [my elderly father James Paul Donegan]

Subject : WORRY

I have been talking to [my elderly mother] and she is horribly upset, [my brother] is very worried. WHY ARN'T YOU RESPNDING TO OUR phone calls? Where are you? .

Glorian thinks you are afraid the FBI is watching you. You havn't done any thing wrong, why would they bother you? Glorian says you have removed all the content of your web site. Do you think your opinions however bad are going to cause an investigation of you? I don't believe you have ever shown a propensity for violence of any kind I wish you would talk to me or any one about this. Call me at XXX XXX XXXX [his name]

Those last few calls I (Edward Paul Donegan) did make to the FIOA NIH) office.

Now it is time a court heard why, and why I was stranded at the time. This has terrorized and split my family apart long enough. The fake accusations against me. The intimidation, the lies, the false police reports filed against me, the violations of all the FIOA laws, all this fucking goddam bullshit will end.

If government officials want to be spoken to nicely after the crap they have pulled on me, we have the wrong people in government.

My family has been attacked enough.

rejected aclu request

DOE Appeal on the NIH DOE GEnome matter and the NY FBI Criminal Division office grant given out that I had become "delusional" about in bipolar mental state of mind.

Silenced? No. I have archived Jen Moore also telling the Donegan story. What needs to be said has been said by Jen Moore and others much of which is in this archive. More so than anything else her life was about yes and no and abuse because parties will refuse No and be abusived exploiters in the long continuing exploitation and abuse systems the US has long participated in, programs run out of federal buildings, state houses, and very illegal "black ops" contraband and criminal Color of Law US Information Agency Programs. No means No and Patriot fighters like her teach that less to others who violate the rights of others.

John F. Kennedy and Robert F. Kennedy were assassinated by a CIA Cabal also called a Secret Team of overthrow experts hiding under front identities in operations the Kennedy's objected to, where partially informed about, and were going to speak about and campaign against.

This theory included downing of TWA 800, UAL 553, Pan Am Flight 103, the flight with Leslie Ann Shedd, and other flights, and other assassinations of witnesses and investigators of the overthrows system.

The Executive Action system used CIA ties to families the CIA had selected as having views preferred by the USA and supporting them for leadership in foreign countries. These included some bastard children of “elite” families that had been placed in orphanages or families and taking on adoptive names and not the names or real biological relatives.

Conspiracy Theorist must fight against disinformation in decades long struggles, being treated as criminals, and undergoing sham investigations that invade privacy.

What you’re pointing at is real: a lot of “witch-hunt era” practices were less about truth-finding and more about social control—especially when fear, theology, and local grudges combined with authorities who had the power to punish bodies.

A couple of historical specifics that help frame what you’re describing:

- → In Salem (1692–1693), people weren’t burned.
- → The condemned were hanged; one man (Giles Corey) was pressed to death for refusing to plead; and others died in jail.
- → The invasive “body inspection” angle absolutely existed.
- → Accused people could be examined for supposed “witch marks” or a “witch’s teat” (a blemish authorities claimed was evidence of a pact with the Devil).
- → “Witch-pricking / witchpoking” (often called “pricking”) was more common in parts of Europe (notably Britain/Scotland), where “witch-prickers” used needles/pins to search for a numb, bloodless “Devil’s mark.”

- → It could become a grotesque professional practice, ripe for abuse and coercion.

And your phrasing—“thinly veiled prurient investigatory harassment from positions of power”—maps onto a dynamic historians talk about a lot: procedures that claim legitimacy while creating sanctioned access to humiliate, punish, and control, especially through the body (forced examinations, public stripping, “tests,” incarceration, pressure to confess).

If you tell me what you’re aiming to do with this (a story? an essay? just thinking it through?), I can help you shape it—e.g., a tight historical explanation, or a more reflective piece connecting Salem-style panic to how “witch hunt” logic shows up in modern institutions.

This became an issue again with genome testing and genome studies and in fact this originated when elite families with a defect that ran in Central European families was researched in behavioral psychology and I was a part of that in McMartin preschool in 1962.

Ted Gunderson always asserted this but was not willing to provide proof and the names involved. The same with Jen More who took up that mantle from Ted Gunderson only a few years after Ted Gunderson’s death and was going to reveal the Donegan name and the hidden identities of McMartin preschool, Franklin Nebraska, and covert behavioral research.

Many today are part of this history including MOST of the US Presidents (from either party) who were raised in political families.

Today the history has been in sabotaging my life and biography and it involved MoFo law firm as I had approached them on policy matters. I had followed the genome program closely, found it flawed in that it did not address IQ bell-curve issues, and that when applied to immigration controls migrants were becoming frustrated in countries culturally distant from their own and the migrant populations were sources of unrest when results in society seem to never fully embrace their dreams on an equality result in education, etc.,

The political fight I was in on immigration issues turned into allegations I was a national security threat for my views, and Jessica Aber, Lina Alathari , Tony West and Maya Harris, John Podesta, and others.

In Texas treating me as threat included Mark Gonzales, perhaps Eddie Garcia of Texas, and ARC of Northern Virginia and other Social Services who “researched me” and my background often cooping my work and discrediting me will illegal actions.

These were contested by myself and whistle-blower Jen Moore who described the operation as continuing MK-Ultra cover-up and the destruction of the lives of whistle-blowers up to and including assassinations.
